Ohttuary.—In the death of Mr. Joseph Britt, aged S3 years, at 1 r. m. yesterday, there passed away an old and esteemed citizen—one who was privileged to see the straggling village of primitive times metamorphosed into this now thriving and busy city. There are not many of this class left. As each year rolls around one or more are laid away, and others will soon be gathered to their fathers, and it is but meet and proper that as their lights go out they should receive at least "the passing tribute of a sigh." Mr. Britt was the son of John W. Britt, of Philadelphia, Pa, who was a member of Gen. Washington's body-guard, serving in that capacity with distinction, and carrying with him in after life honorable scars received in defending the Father of our Country. The subject of this notice was born in Bedford, Pa., in 1796, and removed to Wheeling in 1818, and was, one of the oldest citizens of this city. After arriving here he engaged in lay undand manufacturing brick, continuing in that business for upwards of twenty years, and only relinquishing it to his sons when the infirmities of age prevented his engaging in any active prasant. Of late years he has been very feeble, and for the last three months was confined to his house only to be released by death. He led son inoffensive and quiet-life, and as the reward of honesty, integrity and principle he survived the allotted time of man. He raised a family of eight sons and two daughters. Seyen of his children survived.

Our friends at Bridgeport made an unusual exercion, they say, for the redemption of Belmont county, and while they did not altogether sueceed, still the gain was enough to justify a demonstration on Saturday night last. All evening the roar of cainnon and the glare of rockets could be heard and seen on this side of the river, and going over there one could very easily see that something unasual was our hands. Chimese lanterius and tar barrels dissipated the darkness, and the streets were filled with a jubilant, happy-crowd. After the usual preliminaries in the way of cannonading, marching through the streets, etc., the people, talage numbers, assembled around the Fos large numbers, assembled around the Fees large numbers, assembled around the Fees for pole, where Mayor Robinson, as master of ceremonies, introduced Judge R. About fifty miners were in attendance, and nearly all the banks were represented. Henry Foster was elected chairman, and on assuming the obair remarked that they were sasembled for the purpose of considering the subject of more wages and the best method of procuring them. He and others had come out of their respective banks, and for his part he would stay out, and he hoped others would. In this event the strike would not continue long. Others also spoke of the bad faith of the owners of works and the small wages paid.
